The Village of Scarsdale is a suburban community located in central Westchester, with a history dating to Colonial times. Many residents are professionals and business executives who demonstrate strong support for the educational system. Its median family income is $200,000. Scarsdale has a large international population that reflects the community's appeal to diplomats and leaders in global business, in addition to many residents, some of whom can trace their family history in the Village back through several generations.

The District has been recognized nationally as a premier educational institution since the 1920s; today's program continues to reflect a rich mix of tradition and innovation. In classes small enough to know their students, teachers address individual strengths and challenges. The Scarsdale Public Schools seek to sponsor each student's full development, enabling youth to be effective and independent contributors in a democratic society and an interdependent world. Among noteworthy offerings are world language at the elementary level; a house structure at the Middle School, ensuring coordinated and student-centered instruction; alternative programs for able secondary students who prefer smaller settings; Advanced Topics classes at the High School, replacing Advanced Placement; an emphasis on teaching critical and creative thinking, collaborative learning, and interdisciplinary studies; a culturally responsive education with a focus on diversity, inclusion and belonging, an arts education program using the premier arts institutions of Westchester and New York City; a sustainability initiative aimed at education and carbon footprint reduction; and a Center for Innovation, sparking such initiatives as MakerSpaces, Design Thinking, and Learning Commons. Students take part in a wide range of extra-curricular activities including debate, humanitarian activities, student government, and community service. The Scarsdale School District is a founding member of the Global Learning Alliance, a consortium focusing on the definition of a world-class education.
